

Here, piggy.

The American Association of University Professors just released its annual economic status report.

BGSU faculty were not in the pink.

In fact, BGSU faculty salaries were in the bottom twenty percent for all ranks—setting us apart from all other public universities in Ohio.

That stinks.

Please pardon our blazing speed.

Last week, the BGSU administration issued a statement about unionization, announcing that the campus community is “at the beginning of a very important discussion.”

Faculty have been engaged in this conversation for years — and in fact, the BGSU Faculty Association started its formal campaign for unionization a year and a half ago. That’s fast?

Look for a vote this summer ... unless the administration chooses to slow things down with procedural wrangling. Even if they do, we’re confident that the finish line is in sight.

Fairness. It’s coming at you.
